Helping troubled youth hack the opportunity gap

Workaround. A new style of learning helps coders and hackers bridge social gaps.

David Delmar remembers the moment coding clicked for a kid nicknamed Spanish. He had figured out how to change the colors on the basic web page he was building for the class at Resilient Lab and shouted, "Oh, word!"

"That was this eureka moment where kids saw firsthand that they could create something that they consume regularly," Delmar said. One kid asked if coding could earn him enough money to buy a car. Delmar replied, "You could probably afford two."

Delmar started the Hacking the Opportunity Gap program in September 2014, hoping to bring high-risk and proven-risk urban kids into the world of web design.

"I realized that there were not many people of different ethnic or social and economic backgrounds at the coding conventions I would go to," Delmar said. "For the most part, I found people working in coding to be middle-class white people, which creates a huge problem that's not being addressed."

By working with kids who have been deemed at risk or proven risks in the courts, Delmar has found a way to create opportunities for people he says don't often get the chance to learn such a valuable and lucrative skill set.

"A hacker isn't someone who hacks into Bank of America," Delmar said. "Instead, they look at a problem and find a way around it. Here's a problem, figure it out. This is a social problem [for which] a solution isn't clear. It's not like a word problem in school; it's about finding a new way to go about navigating an old problem."

Delmar visited a Department of Youth Services correctional facility in Roslindale and saw the potential of opening an entire program to teach kids the ways of web design. The results of the program were so successful that the Boston Police Department started helping Resilient Coders get the funding they needed in order to help keep the kids off of the streets. Normally, there are about 12 to 15 students in the school-year-long class.

The students usually come from Dorchester, Roxbury, Mattapan, Hyde Park and Roslindale, and range from age 16 to 24. The three-part program funnels students learning HTML after school into an alternative-style classroom that eventually leads to hourly employment.

"We've seen a huge success rate with real clients," Delmar said.

They work with real clients such as the local travel app Wanderlu, which they designed for the iPhone. When it hit the market, it held the No. 1 sales spot at the app store. Another student earned a job at the Boston Globe when he was 19 years old.

"These kids fit one or both of two categories: social justice activist and hustler. I tell activists that 77 percent of the jobs available will require skills that they're not getting at school, and kids with better resources have better access to them," Delmar said. "There is a massive educational discrepancy, which increases the disparity in neighborhoods. I tell hustlers that there's money to be made and they dive right in."

Legalization. Pro-marijuana groups divided on activist support

In the early stage of Massachusetts' legal pot ballot battle, local activists are betting on the underdog.

The Massachusetts Cannabis Reform Coalition — the group behind Boston's popular pro-pot Freedom Rally and better known as MassCann — last week endorsed a homegrown ballot initiative from a group called Bay State Repeal over one from the much-better-funded Campaign to Regulate Marijuana Like Alcohol.

The Campaign, sponsored by the national Marijuana Policy Project, supports a highly regulated and taxed marketplace for marijuana. BSR, meanwhile, supports legalization with looser restrictions on possessing and growing cannabis and no new taxes.

MassCann members were overwhelmingly in favor of the less restrictive proposal, said Bill Downing, the group's president. The vote, he said, was "a landslide."

Downing is also Bay State Repeal's treasurer.

He said MassCann volunteers planned to collect signatures and donations from revelers at the late September Freedom Rally, which attracts tens of thousands every year and has been a popular magnet for activists and tokers around New England since the first one in 1989.

The endorsement speaks to a divide between the two ballot campaigns on the value of grassroots activism in legalization. SPENCER BUELL

Bugs and traffic: Allston Christmas

Not so merry.
Welcome to Boston, Class of 2000-somethings.

Boston's season of giving, and taking, is here. Sing a curbside carol. Share some holiday cheer. It's Allston Christmas, the most plunderful time of the year.

In just a few days, as the unofficial holiday rolls around, college students citywide were expected to dump all their unwanted ratty loveseats and water-ringed end tables on street corners everywhere.

It's a tempting sight for all the unseasoned first-years descending on the college hub this season, all that free furniture ready to decorate the dwellings of new renters.

But tucked in the fabric and crawling in the crevices of the infamous loot is a hidden danger. The scourge of the late-summer tradition: the bed bug.

It's the perfect storm for infestations, said Jonathan Boyar, principal of Boston pestbusting company Ecologic Entomology.

The critters tend to mature quickly in the summer, with peak growth happening in early September, he said. A couch tainted by bugs lugged into an apartment, he told Metro, can be like a ticking time bomb.

"Unfortunately, there's no 'safe' way to collect curbside used furniture," Boyar told Metro. "A couch or bureau may look perfectly fine on the exterior, but the bugs can hide in tiny crevices inside. Couches for example have lots of inaccessible areas that would be impossible to fully inspect. The bugs are quite adept at getting inside these pieces of furniture and hiding there until food becomes available."

Calls to eradicate the tiny beasts increase every September, said Boyar, who also runs a website bearing his company's logo called the Boston Bed Bug Authority.

Each year, he said, he hears from new and returning students who find out about ongoing infestations that festered over summer months, or those who brought the pests in through a free ride via curbside Lay-Z-Boy.

"Used furniture is by far the most common culprit in most cases in multifamily housing," Boyar said. "It should be avoided."

Bed bugs aren't the only villains of the "holiday" season. Get ready for a traffic-blocking moving truck bonanza.

The city issued over 1,500 permits for movers to unload on dates around the 1st, data shows. This after Mayor Marty Walsh this year allowed movers to book the permits (which start at $69 apiece) online for the first time (you used to have to get them in person).

Good luck out there, folks. Welcome to Boston.

LASIK & Beyond

Taking Your Vision To The Next Level

At New England Eye Center, we truly are taking sight to the next level. Thanks to recent advances in laser and lens implant technology, our highly-trained specialists are helping patients of all ages enjoy the type of clearer, more natural vision they desire. Vision for the way we live here in New England!

Your Eyes Deserve A Surgeon with VISION!

Director of Refractive Surgery
Helen K. Wu, M.D.

To become an accomplished surgeon in refractive surgery, it's important to have VISION and experience backed by consistent patient outcomes and reviews by physician peers. For more than two decades, leading eye surgeon Helen Wu, M.D. has helped set new standards in the field of vision correction-offering the most advanced vision correction options, tailored to each patient's medical and lifestyle needs.

Today, Dr. Wu is the Director of Vision Correction Surgery at the New England Eye Center, affiliated with Tufts University School of Medicine, located in Boston, Massachusetts. She has been performing LASIK, PRK, ICLs and now advanced lens all-laser cataract surgery at New England Eye Center since 1992.

From our all-laser, bladeless LASIK procedure – to exciting developments like our Visian Implantable lens - our commitment to leading edge technology is surpassed only by our dedication to personalized patient care. Patients of New England Eye Center find confidence in knowing we offer experience you can trust and technology you can rely on.

NASA-Approved LASIK - Our all-laser, bladeless LASIK at New England Eye Center has greatly improved results and helped take the fear out of having LASIK. The vast majority of our LASIK and PRK patients now achieve 20/20 vision at distance without glasses or contact lenses. Our method of LASIK is the same type approved for NASA astronauts and military pilots.

Implantable Contact Lens - New England Eye Center is among a select group of practices in the country offering patients the benefits of the Visian Implantable Collamer Lens (ICL). Unlike LASIK, the Visian corrects vision by inserting a delicate intraocular lens-like device atop the eye's natural lens, which is why the Visian is also referred to as the 'Implantable Contact Lens.' All of the refractive surgeons at New England Eye Center are qualified and experienced in performing this brief outpatient procedure to insert the Visian ICL. Because no corneal or other tissue is removed in the Visian ICL procedure, visual recovery is extremely rapid and the ICL can potentially be replaced if the eye's focus changes over time.

Refractive Lens Exchange - If you're frustrated with reading glasses and bifocals, our refractive specialists perform a procedure known as Refractive Lens Exchange. By replacing your eye's aging natural lens with a Intraocular Lens Implant customized specifically for your visual needs - and your lifestyle - allowing you to see better, look younger and never have to worry about developing cataracts!

Laser Cataract Surgery - For seniors experiencing changes in their vision – or who have been diagnosed with a cataract – New England Eye Center is turning the dream of Laser Cataract Surgery into reality. We are currently among only the top 3% of practices in the country to offer patients the added precision and accuracy of Laser Cataract Surgery using OptiMedica® Catalys™ Precision Laser System.

This year, take your vision to the NEXT LEVEL by giving yourself or a loved one the Gift of Sight. Now that's a Gift that keeps on Giving. A blessed New Year from the surgeons and staff of New England Eye Center.

Felines. MSPCA to waive adoption fee this weekend

Does anyone want a cat? In hopes of finding 200 adult cats new homes, the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals is waiving adoption fees this weekend.

Usually, there is a standard $150 adoption fee for cats ages 1 and up, which goes toward spaying or neutering, shots, microchipping, ID tags and a professional evaluation. But this coming Saturday and Sunday, those fees will be waived in hopes of emptying the shelters to make room for new homeless cats.

"Summertime is the hardest time to find homes for older cats as animal shelters tend to have more kittens and it can be difficult to compete for attention with young and adorable kittens," MSPCA spokesman Rob Halpin said. "The End of Summer adoption lets adult cats shine."

Throughout the adoption's last four years, MSPCA has placed 800 cats into new homes, and is looking to get that number to 1,000 on their fifth anniversary.

"There's two things to keep in mind," Halpin said. "Cats live 15 to 20 years, so adult cats have a lot of life in them. But they also know the drill. They usually come to us having lived in homes with other cats, dogs and kids, so we know what their personality is like."

While kittens are obviously wicked cute, that doesn't mean they aren't annoying as they figure out how to be a cat.

"Kittens in the frenzy phase at about 10-12 weeks are setting out from scratch, so you don't know their personality yet," Halpin said. "So if you like shy independent cats, or a lap cat who'll watch TV with you or sit on your lap while you read, we have a sense of the adult cat's personality."

All three of MSPCA's animal shelters in Jamaica Plain, Methuen and Centerville will be participating. More information is on the MSPCA website at <http://www.mspca.org/adoption/>.

Funding for the adoption has been provided by the Catvocate group, an all-volunteer assembly of cat enthusiasts who donate time and money to help find permanent homes for adult cats in MSPCA's care.

"There's such a karmic reason to adopt because you're saving two lives," Halpin said. "You're liberating one from a cage and you are making room for another homeless cat to have a place to temporarily stay." NATE ROMAN

Colorado theater gunman sentenced to 12 lifetimes and 3,318 years in prison

DA. George Brauchler had called for Holmes to be given every day of the longest possible sentence.

Condemning the movie massacre gunman to 12 life sentences and the maximum 3,318 years in prison for his rampage in a midnight screening of a Batman film, a Colorado judge on Wednesday said evil and mental illness were not mutually exclusive.

"It is the court's intention that the defendant never set foot in free society again. ... If there was ever a case that warranted the maximum sentences, this is the case," Arapahoe County District Court Judge Carlos Samour said.

Survivors and relatives of those killed clapped and cheered as Samour then ordered deputies to remove James Holmes from his courtroom, and the 27-year-old gunman was led away in shackles.

The defendant was found guilty by a jury last month of murdering 12 people and wounding 70 during his rampage inside the packed screening at a multiplex in the Denver suburb of Aurora.

The jury did not reach a unanimous decision on whether Holmes should be executed. That meant the former neuroscience graduate student, who had pleaded insanity, got a dozen automatic life sentences with no possibility of parole.

Samour still had to sentence Holmes on attempted murder counts and an explosives charge.

Condemning the shooter to the longest term he could issue, the judge said Holmes decided to "quit" in life and that he set out to kill "as many innocents as possible."

Samour said whatever illness Holmes may have suffered, there was overwhelming evidence that part of his conduct had been driven by "moral obliquity, mental depravity ... anger, hatred, revenge or similar evil conditions."

He said "the $64 million question" that still lingered was whether the defendant was afflicted by a mental condition, disease or defect, and if so, to what extent. REUTERS

Television journalists killed in on-air shooting; suspect fatally shoots self Broadcast. Videos of the shooting were posted to Twitter and on Facebook by a man identifying himself as Bryce Williams.

Two television journalists were killed during a live broadcast in Virginia on Wednesday, shot by a suspect who was a former employee of the TV station and who called himself a "powder keg" of anger over what he saw as racial discrimination at work and elsewhere in the United States.

The suspect, 41-year-old Vester Lee Flanagan, shot himself as police pursued him on a Virginia highway hours after the shooting. Flanagan, who was African-American, died later at a hospital, police said.

The journalists who were killed were reporter Alison Parker, 24, and cameraman Adam Ward, 27. Both journalists were white, as is a woman whom they were interviewing. The woman was wounded and was in stable condition, a hospital spokesman said.

Social media postings by a person who appeared to be Flanagan indicated the suspect had grievances against the station, CBS affiliate WDBJ7 in Roanoke, Virginia, which let him go two years ago.

The person also posted video that appeared to show the attack filmed from the shooter's vantage point.

Flanagan sent ABC News a 23-page fax about two hours after the shooting, saying his attack was triggered by the June 17 mass shooting at a black church in Charleston,

Alison Parker and Adam Ward / FACEBOOK

South Carolina, the network said. Nine people were killed, and a white man has been charged in that rampage.

The network cited Flanagan as saying he had suffered racial discrimination, sexual harassment and bullying at work. He had been attacked by black men and white women for being a gay black man, he said.

The on-air shooting occurred at about 6:45 a.m. at Bridgewater Plaza, a Smith Mountain Lake recreation site about 200 miles southwest of Washington, D.C. REUTERS

White House says shooting points to need for gun control

The White House said that the shooting in Virginia is another example of gun violence that is "becoming all too common."

White House spokesman Josh Earnest told reporters that Congress can pass legislation that would have a "tangible impact of reducing gun violence in this country."

Earnest said he had not had the chance to speak with the president about the shooting. Earnest said the thoughts and prayers of those in the White House are with those killed.

Three things to know

Hillary Clinton: Investments in rural US will boost economy

Democratic presidential candidate Hillary Clinton unveiled a plan to improve rural economies by encouraging additional investment, boosting profitability at family farms, increasing clean energy production and improving access to education and health care.

Roughly 46 million U.S. residents — about 15 percent of the population — live in rural areas that “lie at the heart of what makes this country great,” but “despite their critical role in our economy, too many rural communities are not sharing in our nation's economic gains,” Clinton's campaign said.

Clinton made several stops in the early-voting state of Iowa on Wednesday to discuss her plan to improve farm-area economies.

Clinton's plan would involve everything from access to capital for rural companies via a Farm Credit Administration program to simplifying regulations on small community banks to making permanent a tax credit for investments in rural areas.

There would be increased funding for agricultural education programs, and Clinton would fight for the type of comprehensive immigration reform that would affect agricultural workers, according to a campaign fact sheet. REUTERS

Obama plans to raise cybersecurity concerns with China's Xi

The White House said on Wednesday that President Barack Obama will “no doubt” raise concerns about China's cybersecurity behavior when he meets with Chinese President Xi Jinping next month.

Obama will host Xi at the White House in September for a state visit. The U.S. has alleged that Chinese hackers have stolen information from U.S. computer servers. REUTERS

Bricks is also getting free shipping and free handling. That's a real steal because Non-Massachusetts residents must pay over eight hundred dollars for each state of Massachusetts Vault Brick.

Just a few weeks ago, nobody knew these valuable U.S. State Silver Bars locked away in the private vaults of the Lincoln Treasury would be allocated to the U.S. Commemorative Gallery for a limited release to Massachusetts residents. These Silver Bars bearing the State of Massachusetts double forged proclamation are now the talk of the town and that's why everyone's trying to get them.

"As Executive Advisor to the Lincoln Treasury, I get paid to know when there's precious metal to be had. So when I was informed that these solid U.S. State Silver Bars had finally surfaced and are actually being handed over at just the state minimum to residents of the state of Massachusetts who beat the order deadline, I pushed for this announcement to be widely advertised.

"These heavy bars are solid .999 pure fine silver and will always be a valuable precious metal which is why everyone is snapping up as many as they can before they're all gone," said Mary Ellen Withrow, the now retired 40th Treasurer of the United States of America.

The former Treasurer wants to make one thing very clear. Massachusetts residents only have three days to call the Toll Free Order Hotlines to get the U.S. State Silver Bars.

"Pride runs deep in Massachusetts and we know residents can't wait to get their hands on these heavy Silver Bars bearing the state of Massachusetts double forged proclamation, but we've never seen anything like this before. The phone lines are ringing off the hook," said Timothy J. Shissler, Executive Director of Vault Operations at the private Lincoln Treasury.

These valuable U.S. State Silver Bars are impossible to get at banks, credit unions or the Government since they do not mint silver bars. In fact, they're only being handed over at state minimum to residents "With U.S. State Silver Bars being handed over to Massachusetts residents at just the state minimum of $57 everyone's rushing to get sealed Vault Bricks loaded with five Massachusetts State Silver Bars before the deadline ends 3 days from today's publication date."

—Mary Ellen Withrow, retired 40th Treasurer of the United States of America

■ LOADED WITH MASSACHUSETTS STATE SILVER BARS: These heavy State of Massachusetts Vault Bricks contain the only existing U.S. State Silver Bars bearing the State of Massachusetts double forged proclamation. Massachusetts residents are authorized to get individual State Silver Bars at just $57 state minimum. That's why nearly everyone is taking full Vault Bricks loaded with five Massachusetts State Silver Bars before they're all gone. And here's the best part. Every Massachusetts resident who gets at least two Vault Bricks is also getting free shipping and free handling. That's a real steal because Non-Massachusetts residents must pay over eight hundred dollars for each state of Massachusetts Vault Brick.

of the state of Massachusetts who call the Toll Free Hotline before the deadline ends three days from today's publication date.

To make it fair, special Toll Free Overflow Hotlines have been set up to ensure all residents have an equal chance to get them.

Rapid shipments to Massachusetts residents are scheduled to begin with the first calls being accepted at precisely 8:30am today.

"We're bracing for all the calls and doing everything we can to make sure no one gets left out, but the U.S. State Silver Bars are only being handed over at just the state minimum for the next three days or until they're all gone, whichever comes first. For now, residents can get U.S. State Silver Bars at just the state minimum as long as they call before the order deadline ends," confirmed Shissler.

Emily Ratajkowski doesn't want to be the hot girl

THE FUN STARTS HERE

The model and actress, now in "We Are Your Friends," seeks meatier roles.

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metlino.us

Emily Ratajkowski knows who classic French filmmaker Robert Bresson is. That shouldn't be shocking. Her mother is an academic and her father is an artist. But we've been conditioned to think models aren't cultured, just as we've been conditioned to think models aren't actors. Ratajkowski wants to be all three. Her big acting break was no less than a David Fincher film, as Andie, the student sleeping with Ben Affleck's Nick, in "Gone Girl." She's since played herself in the "Entourage" movie, and she's now in "We Are Your Friends," as the personal assistant/girlfriend of a big time DJ (Wes Bentley) who catches the affections of his young mentee (Zac Efron).

Traditionally there's a stigma attached to models who transition into acting.

That happens a lot more to young women than it does to young men. There are far more stigmas attached to women who have been thought of as a sex symbol. That's just silly.

Women's sex appeal is usually filtered through the male gaze. You've spoken about how you want women to reclaim sexuality and own it.

Even in "Gone Girl" and "We Are Your Friends," you watch those characters at moments through the eyes of the male characters. I think there will be parts in the future where it's just about the women and female journeys. That's what I'm constantly struggling to find. That's why I'm taking a slow road to which films I take.

You actually wanted to be an actor since you were a kid. In fact, you became a model so you could become an actor.

Yeah, isn't that funny? Not many people know that. I was one of those kids who tried everything, and theater was definitely something that stuck. I went to UCLA for visual art and thought about becoming an English professor or a writer. I've always been creatively inclined. My first love, though, was theater.

What were some roles you were playing as a kid?

I was the Little Match Girl, which was my first lead in the sixth grade, which was a big deal for me. But I fell in love with acting by watching theater. I lived in London when I was five years old while my mom was teaching literature there. Her teaching was about how literature related to theater, so she got all these free tickets. We would go to London theater shows once a week instead of seeing movies.

When you first started acting professionally,

On David Fincher

So much press about Fincher is over the high number of takes he does. But actors — not all of them — seem to like it.

I thought it was amazing, not only because I'm a young actor and I wanted to spend as much time as I could on set, but also because the technique he uses makes you stop thinking. That's a great thing. Maybe it's a rookie move, but I definitely think about the history of my character and where they've come from. That can get in the way of you living the scene. But he gives you so many notes and you do it so many times that you stop thinking. Overacting can happen and he erases that.

I guess journalists just feel bad for the actors.

I mean, don't feel bad for me.

what kind of roles were you getting?

Because I was a model, it was mostly the hot girl in high school or the cheerleader. They're like, "Oh, she's a model," then you always get model parts. For me those parts weren't exactly exciting. That's why I stopped acting for a while. I wasn't interested in the Nickelodeon/Disney versions of women.

A David Fincher film is a pretty good get for your first major film.

It was a good get, for sure. What was interesting about [Andie] in "Gone Girl" [is that] in the book you read her from the perspective of Nick and Amy. She's just his mistress. I tried to add something to that, that made her feel like something young women could relate to — that she had her own stuff. In "We Are Your Friends" I really think that Sophie has an interesting arc. She has a front that she puts out there, and a lot of people probably have ideas of who she is. I imagine her being very different in college, her going through different phases throughout her life. There are many versions of Sophie. I related to that.

'No Escape' is for the xenophobes

'No Escape'

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

The white-knuckle thriller "No Escape" pulls off an impressive feat: It's a xenophobic film about xenophobia. The ones in peril are an American family, headed by Owen Wilson and Lake Bell, who arrive in a never-identified Asian country right as a bloody coup breaks out. Armed psychos fill the city streets, taking a special predilection toward foreigners.

But even before fellow Americans are being shot in the head, the film is painting even the nonviolent locals

Every now and then in "No Escape," Pierce Brosnan conveniently materializes to save Owen Wilson. THE WEINSTEIN COMPANY

as subhuman Others. An early scene finds Wilson's Jack strolling through a market, eyeing the residents with suspicion, flustered to find no one speaks the language of a country on the other side of the world. Every Asian character is filmed like an ominous grotesque — that is, save for the chirpy man who greets them wearing a cowboy hat and proclaiming the greatness of the U.S. of A.

Amazingly, every now and then it's possible to forget "No Escape"'s retrograde politics and get caught up in what is, at base, a survive-the-night thrill ride. It's still always inherently xenophobic — a rightwinger's nightmare that offers the message that no place is safe for an American. Wilson and Bell are ideal outside-the-box action leads — hypothetically. In practice, they only get a minute or two to show off their relaxed, flirty banter before they're reduced to anonymous freak-out machines.

At times, "No Escape" aims to be a lean, cut-to-the-bone horror show. But the writing is sloppy. One of Jack and Annie's daughters can always be counted on to turn into a neurotic pill at the wrong time. Every once in a while Pierce Brosnan, as a strip joint regular, ex-pat and of course ex-Special Forces action god, swings by, and right when the heroes need him. Late in, he launches into a speech about how the real root of the coup stems from globalization and the way American industriousness has no interest in how its affairs affect locals. Then it's right back to scary Asians hunting down lily-white Yanks.

The ending, however, which we won't reveal, is hilarious, and it would be scathingly satirical too, if the film had an iota of self-awareness. Which it does not.

Jake Johnson, center, bro's down with bro's Mike Birbiglia and Sam Rockwell in Joe Swanberg's "Digging for Fire." THE ORCHARD

'Digging for Fire'

Director: Joe Swanberg
Stars: Jake Johnson, Rosemarie DeWitt
Rating: R

Microbudget god Joe Swanberg works with "names" now, but don't get the wrong idea. Sure, his not-quite-sellout films — "Drinking Buddies," "Happy Christmas," the new "Digging for Fire" — may look handsome (sometimes). But there are reams of shaggy-dog moments, especially in "Digging for Fire." At its best, Swanberg has encouraged his name cast — a seriously large name cast, worthy of three Woody Allen films — to cut loose over a plot that normally would take dominance.

Rosemarie DeWitt and Jake Johnson play marrieds who each court temptation. We're thus set up for an examination of not so much infidelity as much as the prison of marriage with kid(s), made by a filmmaker who's shied from baring his anxieties. But the bulk of the film is devoted to (admittedly entertaining) improv by the all-star ringers, all of it eating up an already brief running time and meaning Swanberg doesn't get to explore his subject with any depth. It becomes a painfully simple lesson on why you should not stray from marriage, worsened by an excruciatingly on-the-nose metaphor, in which Johnson becomes obsessed with digging up a skeleton on the property. Not only is it obvious, but the message — don't dredge up your naughty feelings — proves weirdly retrograde. MP

'We Are Your Friends' is slightly more than a bro movie

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

In "We Are Your Friends," a 30-something alkie DJ god (Wes Bentley) preaches to his mentee Cole — played with blank-faced puppy-dog sincerity by Zac Efron — to embrace originality, not imitation. It's too easy to say their film doesn't remotely heed this advice, but it is true. A douchebag "Saturday Night Fever," it slips in a rote love triangle and even a riff on "Boiler Room." Like "Fever," Tony Manero, Cole keeps getting dragged down by his go-nowhere friends, the most despicable of which, Jonny Weston's bulletheaded hothead Mason, says things like, "Don't bro me if you don't know me." "Friends" does, however, indulge more than required in the grunt work of the trade. The film's best scene finds Efron's Cole offering his secret recipe, breaking down how certain types of beats turn revelers into swaying zombies. It knows more than it lets on, but it keeps getting dragged down to a stupid, if watchable, melodrama, as well as to the even more stupid antics of its young characters.

To its credit, "Friends" shows some interest in the inner life of its token female character (Emily Ratajkowski) and some awareness of a cruel world outside its youthful/white microcosm. But it's mostly young, dumb and full of pickup lines like "Your body is 81 percent water, and I'm thirsty."

"Friends" feels both made for people like Cole and written by them as well. Its target audience will connect to a film that speaks to them, then turn on it the second they hit 30.

The rocker says he's keeping it authentic on his latest album.

LISA WEIDENFELD

Lenny Kravitz is one of those musicians who could be coasting by now. He's had huge hits, appeared in "The Hunger Games" and performed in the Super Bowl with the famous Left Shark (oh, and Katy Perry and Missy Elliott). But he's just as high profile as ever, with his 2014 album "Strut" earning high praise from Rolling Stone, and a wardrobe malfunction that took the Internet by storm.

"Strut" actually came about while Kravitz was hard at work on "The Hunger Games," but he says that doesn't mean they're connected. "Does one inspire the other at times? Yes, but this just happened to be the time the music materialized in my head. I was faced with either having to let it go because I was so busy filming at five or six in the morning to the evening, or take the time and capture it. That's what I did."

Heading to film school

The resulting album has a gritty old-fashioned feel to it, which has led to some moody, black-and-white music videos that almost look like art films. "That's what I gravitate toward, really. The music I think calls for that," says Kravitz. He says he likes black and white because "it can be so much more dynamic and realistic."

He found people to collaborate with who were already doing the type of work he was imagining for the videos, but he says the result is always a pleasant surprise. "You still never know what you're going to get until it's done. Videos have always been that way. You hire the person you want, and everything's perfect until you get it, and it's not what you thought. Sometimes it is. But these last videos, I was very happy with."

Indie labels

The album also marks his first release under his own record label, Roxie Records. "It gave me an opportunity to exercise a lot of the things I've learned. And also to follow my desires: This is how the money's spent, this is what we're going to do, etc.," he explains.

But just because he's running things now doesn't mean he's changing what he does too much. He played many of the instruments on "Strut," just as he's always

Kravitz played for one of the biggest audiences in the world earlier this year when he played the Super Bowl halftime show with Katy Perry, which he called "surreal."

"I've done my own concerts in front of a million people. I did a concert years ago in Rio for a million people. [At the Super Bowl] there are less people in front of done. "It's just the way I started. I didn't do it on purpose. I couldn't afford to pay people when I made my first record, so I played all the instruments myself. Then it became sort of my thing, my sound."

you, but you realize it's going out to millions of people across the world. So you definitely don't want to screw up," he says.

Getting all the moving pieces in order is a highly streamlined operation. "Everything is to the second. There's no improvisation whatsoever. Everything is on the mark," says Kravitz. He also had high praise for the headliner, saying Perry "hadn't eaten for, like, two weeks. She's very disciplined, working day and night. So it was a good release afterwards."

Finding the right sound

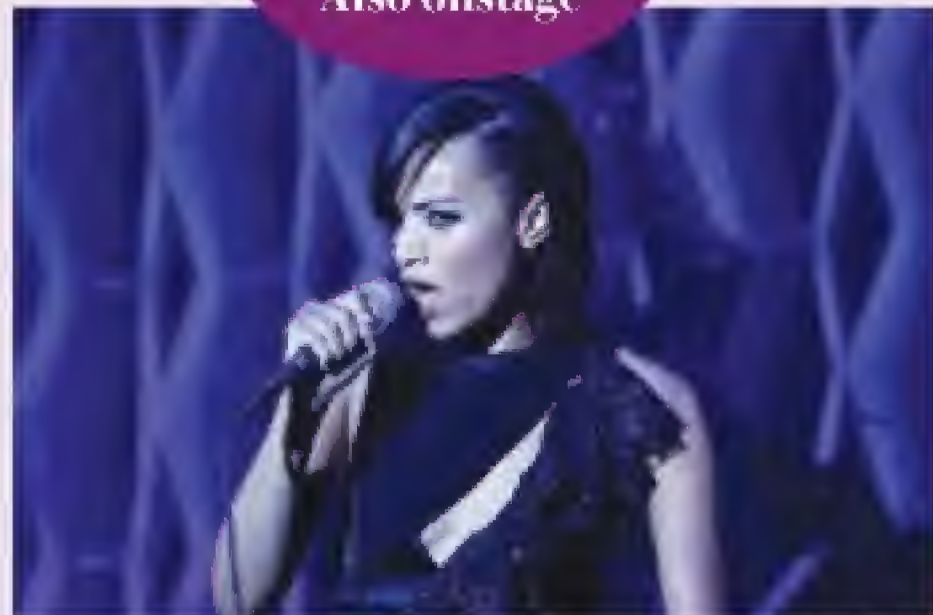

The album has been enough of a success that Kravitz is still touring in support of it a year later, but he says he doesn't let that kind of thing go to his head too much. "Anytime

Bong Wish is the project of Mariam Saleh, bassist/vocalist for the on-hiatus local band Fat Creeps. Compared to the Creeps, Bong Wish, true to its name, is more psychedelic, less gloomy and more indebted to the '60s, with flute and violin parts lending a nice baroque touch to the usual guitar, bass and drums. They'll be joined here by Metal Feathers. MATTHEW DINARO

'Waitress' packs a lot of flavor but less substance

The A.R.T.'s pie-baking musical has strong performances and not very memorable music.

NICK DUSSAULT
@MetroBOS
nick@metro.us

"Waitress," the Broadway-bound musical adaptation of the 2007 indie film, is quite good. The problem is, it should be great.

The story is perfect for a musical. A young woman stuck in small-town America in an abusive marriage sees a way out via a pie-making contest with a big cash prize. Though one final setback makes her dream of winning unattainable, all ends well courtesy of a fairly predictable feel-good plot.

Director Diane Paulus has assembled an incredible team of actors and artists who make the production look great. Despite the fluff factor of the script, every character is interesting, and given a great deal of depth.

Jessie Mueller, who won a Tony Award for playing Carole King in "Beautiful: The Carole King Musical," stars and finds the weathered emotional core of Jenna, almost forcing you to identify with her plight. When she sings, the sound itself is worth the price of admission.

Keala Settle tears up the stage and everything in her way as tough-talking waitress Becky. The vocal dynamo is at her sassy best when her own questionable relationship is revealed and she responds with the powerhouse "I Didn't Plan It." Drew Gehling is equally impressive as Jenna's extramarital love interest (and OB/GYN) Dr. Pomatter and Dakin Matthews is both curmudgeonly and touching as Joe, the elderly owner of the diner where Jenna works.

Paulus' direction is impeccable and she finds humor in small moments, such as the day to day minutiae of diner work and the awkwardness of being caught in the act. Her transitions are seamless, which is no small feat, given the size of the orchestra on stage.

Pop star Sara Bareilles wrote the music, and herein lies the problem. What you can hear over the excessively loud orchestra is safe but forgettable. You shouldn't be leaving the theater humming her 2013 hit "Brave." You should be humming something from an otherwise top-notch "Waitress."

From screen to stage

"Waitress" is based on the 2007 movie starring Keri Russell and Nathan Fillion. The film was written and directed by Adrienne Shelly, and the musical continues the tradition of an all-female team with Paulus directing, Bareilles writing the music and Jessie Nelson writing the book. The show already has some approval from its screen cast — Fillion was spotted attending last week.

From HoJo's to Hojoko

The former Howard Johnson hotel is now home to a hip, Japan-inspired bar.

@LUKEONEIL47

Opening any type of bar is a daunting task in the first place, so it's not surprising when new spots tend to streamline their initial rollout. At Hojoko at the Verb Hotel, they've taken the exact opposite tack, plunging headlong into a extensive bar program that ranges from the silly fun of frozen cocktails and punches out of a cooler patrolled by a windup toy to intricate stirred spirit cocktails and wide-ranging sake offerings.

But it's all with a playful presentation, something like a Japanese sushi surf shack with video games — a decided 180-degree turn from chef and owners Tim and Nancy Cushman's widely lauded O Ya.

About that name

Hojoko, which is a made-up Japanese word that plays on the former tenants here, a Howard Johnson hotel, loosely means the child of Hojo, explains Daren Swisher, who runs the bar with Joseph Cammarata. The feeling is meant to evoke the style of a Japanese pub known as an izakaya.

"They're basically a sort of third space on the map in the culture there. People have really small apartments, so the izakaya almost functions as a living room. Generally the focus is on drinking sake, and the food is stuff that you want to eat while drinking — grilled food and fried food, generally more-assertive flavors."

Flavor breakdown

Plenty of those show up in the duo's cocktails, such as the Budokan, made with Hamilton

151 Demerara Overproof rum, Madeira, Demerara sugar, shiitake mushroom absinthe and bitters, a sort of improved rum Old Fashioned riff with a split base between the high-proof rum and the fortified Portuguese wine.

"The idea here is as it waterizes, everything kind of stretches out a little bit," Swisher says. "Madeira has a lot of savory qualities and we wanted to reinforce that with the addition of the mushroom absinthe, a little bit of sugar, a little bit of bitter."

Inspiration from Japan

"We wanted to include some Japanese touches but we didn't want to be over the top, with some accessible flavors that wouldn't be too different for people but would also be some natural pairings with the food," he says.

That means rice wine vinegars, miso, sesame, ponzu, sake, Shochu and so on. The Kyoto takes rye, Averna, Fernet and a tincture of sansho, a sort of a Japanese peppercorn with a light tongue-numbing quality — but in a good way.

Time for some beach drinks

Frozen cocktails and punches are similarly well thought out, but more approachable than some of the other drinks. The pina colada is made with Plantations Barbados rum, J. Wray & Nephew Overproof rum, pineapple and coconut, and comes with a toasted marshmallow as an added bonus.

"Generally the idea is for it to be fun," Swisher says. "Joe comes from a pretty serious cocktail place [Ames Street Deli] but we wanted it to be approachable, we wanted to have a drink in front of you really fast. ... We've jokingly been calling it a not-cocktail-bar cocktail bar."

Back to the future for downtown Las Vegas

Other attractions downtown

Check out the programs for the three performance spaces in this impressive new $470 million center in Symphony Park, home to the Las Vegas Philharmonic and Nevada Ballet Theatre.

DISCOVERY Children's Museum

This three-story house of fun and education in Symphony Park will keep kids happy for hours.

Downtown Container Park

This unique place takes old shipping containers and converts them into fashionable shops, bars and restaurants, with live entertainment too.

Vegas always has to be different. In most cities, downtown is where the action is. But in Vegas, it's where the action was — before the development of The Strip five miles south.

Downtown Vegas is bouncing back. The city and local businesses are actively revitalizing the area, which centers around Fremont Street, the first paved street in the city. Nicknamed Glitter Gulch, Fremont Street is where famous casinos like the Golden Nugget and Flamingo's Horseshoe stand. Both have stayed happily retro compared to the modern luxury resorts on the Strip.

Apart from old-fashioned casinos, downtown's main attraction has long been the nightly light show at the Fremont Street Experience. Four blocks long, the canopy above the street has 12.5 million LED lights and provides a display as spectacular as anything you'll find on the Strip.

However, until recently there wasn't much else to persuade people to catch a cab or take the Deuce bus out to Fremont Street if they were staying on the Strip. That's all changed, though, and downtown has new hotels and restaurants, more shopping and several major Vegas attractions getting a second life.

The nightly light show on Fremont Street stretches four blocks, with 12.5 million LED lights.

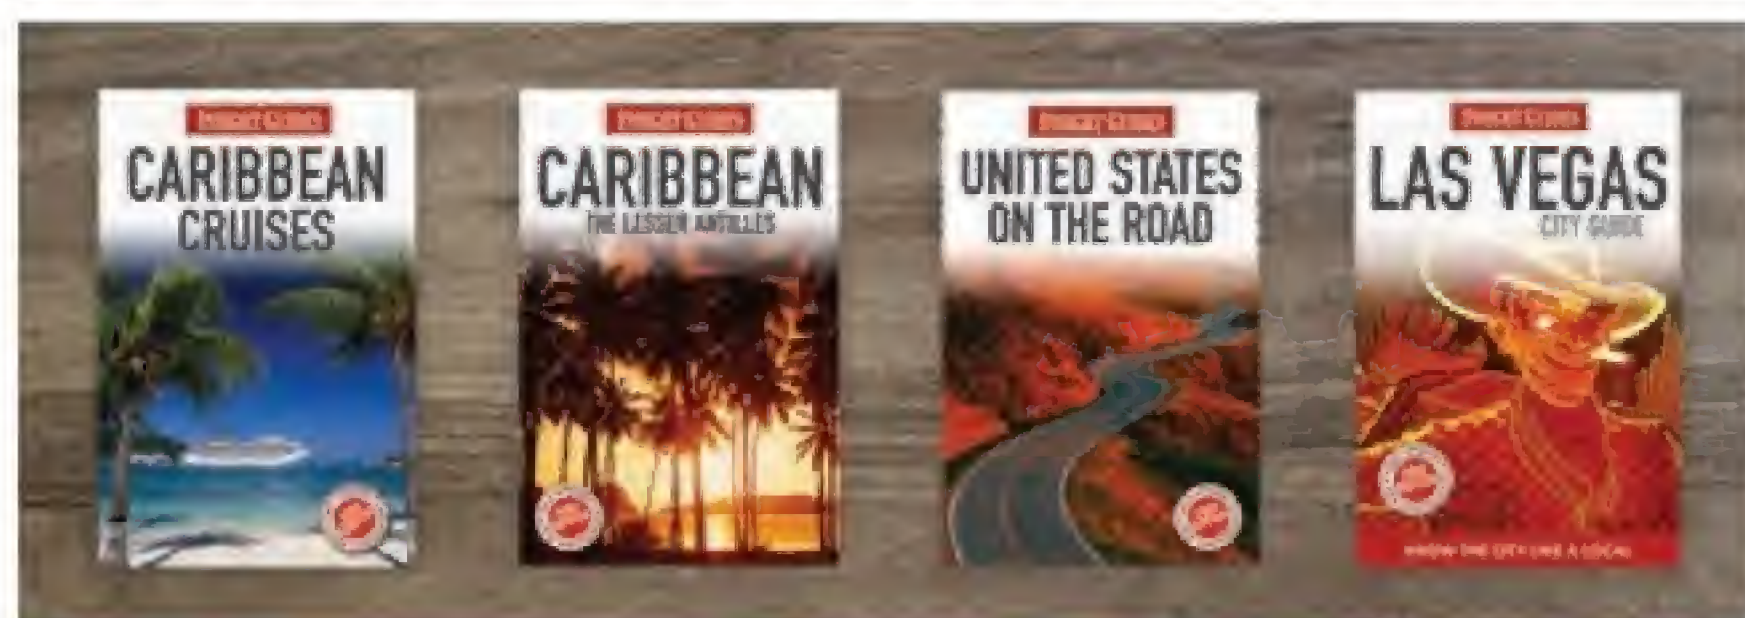

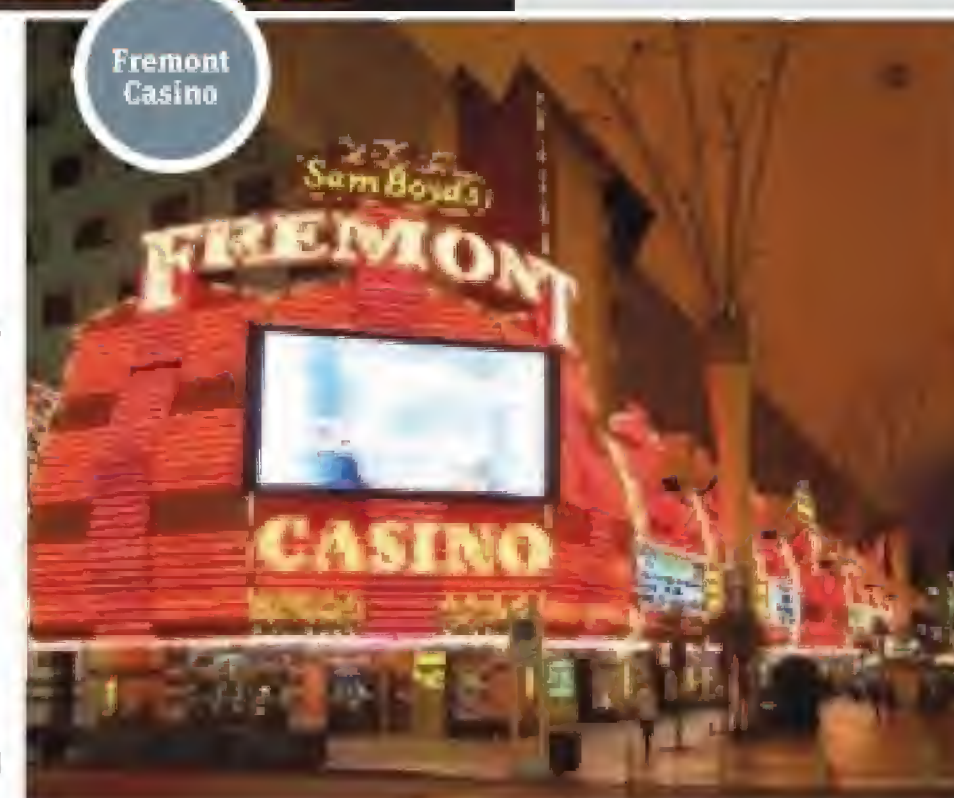

One of the best is the Mob Museum, officially named the National Museum of Organized Crime and Law Enforcement (www.themobmuseum.org). Since it opened in 2012, it's been reason enough on its own for visitors to head downtown. It's an enthralling look at organized crime and the battle against it throughout history, with Las Vegas playing a major role, of course. It's housed in the former courthouse, where many mafia trials took place.

Insert Coin(s) (www.insertcoinslv.com) on Fremont East is a bar with DJs and a huge collection of vintage video games, some going back over 30 years, like "Frogger" and "Defender."

Also for vintage fans, The Boneyard at the Neon Museum (www.neonmuseum.org) in northern downtown collects and restores old neon signs. A guided tour here is a fascinating walk through Las Vegas history as downtown celebrates its past while looking to its future. INSIGHT GUIDES | MIKE GERRARD AND DONNA DAILEY

NFL. A glance at the best over/under bets in the NFL this season.

The NFL season begins in just two weeks. We continue to look at the best value out there when it comes to over/under win totals for 2015:

Dolphins (8.5 wins – over)

It's now or never for head coach Joe Philbin. The Dolphins are coming off of back-to-back 8-8 seasons, so now is the time to "go for it." They more or less made that statement public in March when they signed Ndamukong Suh to a six-year, $114 million contract. On offense, Ryan Tannehill will have new things. A "winner" in the NFL is not one of them. Marshall has never appeared in a play-off game and 2015 probably won't be his lucky season. The man who will likely throw the balls Marshall's way in 2015 has also been a part of many failed NFL seasons. Ryan Fitzpatrick is 34-56-1 in his career.

- Metro likes the under on the Ravens (9) and Broncos (10).

Colts (11 – under)

The Colts have gone 11-5 in each of the past three seasons. But too much can go wrong throughout the course of an NFL season. Eleven wins is far too high of an over/under for a team that lost 45-7 and was exposed in its last game.

Davante Adams will be one of Aaron Rodgers' favorite targets with Jordy Nelson done for the year. / GETTY IMAGES

BIG NAMES GO DOWN, FRESH FACES STEP UP

Scheduling your fantasy draft is a dangerous game of roulette. If you already had it, there's a good chance a couple of the owners are considering playing in traffic as we speak.

That's because we've already seen a fistful of very significant injuries happen in preseason games and training camp practices. The safe, three-conform play is to hold your draft roughly 24 hours before the first kick, allowing us to gather all available information and to avoid season-decimating bad luck. For those who haven't drafted yet, adjusting to these seasonenders is crucial.

The Adams family

Jordy Nelson saw 28.1 percent of the Packers' targets last year, parlaying that into a 98-1,519-13 season that made him fantasy's No. 3 wide receiver. The majority of those targets will now go to Davante Adams, a player who was thrown to by Aaron Rodgers 11 times in last year's playoff game against the Cowboys. The trust Rodgers showed in that game carried over to the offseason, where the former second-round pick was the unquestioned star of the program. Although Adams has some route-running and separation limitations, he's going to get at least 110 targets from the game's best quarterback this season. Move Adams into the late fourth round of your draft board with confidence.

All about the Benjamins

The Panthers decided to take a sink-or-swim approach with Kelvin Benjamin last season, declining to reduce his playing time despite numerous rookie mistakes. So even though his efficiency was poor, he finished as fantasy's No. 17 wide receiver on the back

Injury adjustments

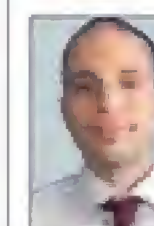

Keep an eye on these players as the season approaches.

- Jordan Reed, Redskins — The mismatch-creating Reed finally appears healthy, and Niles Paul is done for the year.
- Leonard Hankerson, Falcons — Kyle Shanahan handpicked Hankerson to come to Atlanta to back up old man Roddy White.
- Khiry Robinson, Saints — C.J. Spiller's knee scope doesn't seem major, but the underrated Robinson is ready to pounce if it is.

of 146 targets (sixth-most in league). Now that Benjamin is with Nelson on the ACL recovery list, the Panthers will be forced to use Devin Funchess similarly. The second-round rookie's only competition for Cam Newton's attention will be Greg Olsen, Ted Ginn, Jericho Cotchery and Corey Brown. Bump Funchess into the eighth round and Olsen into the fifth.

It's a White out

The Bears used the No. 7 overall pick on Kevin White, expecting the athletic freak to step right in and replace Brandon Marshall. Instead, he landed on reserve/PUP after undergoing surgery to repair a stress fracture in his shin. Eddie Royal projects as the biggest beneficiary here, as he'll be on the field in all two-wide sets and has great chemistry with Jay Cutler. When these two were together in Denver in 2008, Royal posted an impressive 91-980-5 line as a rookie.
